Aka Update:

Light and fluffy
pancake

Thanks as always! This is Aka. Recently I went with my friend Y-chan to watch a musical by the Shiki Theatre Company. How should I put it...it was amazing! (I have a great vocabulary, lol)

On our way back, we went to Shimokitazawa to eat pancakes. I was so hungry that, for some reason, I ended up ordering a chicken soboro* instead. I couldn't help it! After looking at the photos on the menu, carbs looked so tempting!

Wishing he had
more girl power,
Aka

But I wanted to go the light and fluffy route...

*T/N: SOBORO CONSISTS OF GROUND MEAT SEASONED WITH SOY SAUCE, SERVED OVER A HEAPING BOWL OF RICE.

Miko Iino

- ◆ First year at Shuchiin Academy
- ◆ Student Council Auditing Officer
- ◆ Physical Traits: Small stature
- ◆ Side Heroine

Her father is a High Court judge and her mother is a member of an international humanitarian organization. Both of them are extremely busy, so she spends most of her time at home with the housekeeper.

From her isolation, Iino found a connection to her parents through their shared sense of justice, and since then she has been fixated on the idea. However, what she possessed was a sense of justice for the sake of justice. It's safe to say that this stemmed from her lack of maturity. Iino is a hard worker, but she tends to be narrow-minded and reckless. She's incapable of dishonest behaviors and blindly believes that justice will always prevail. She's a dreamer and an idealist. Both her mind and her body are still growing, and therefore she's still a child.

On the other hand, one of Iino's strengths is her ability to see things for what they are. She doesn't heed rumors or follow the crowd—she thinks for herself and makes her own judgments. However, she's liable to grave misunderstandings, which is a testament to her imperfection.

She's underdeveloped, for better or for worse. As for how she'll grow to maturity, no one knows yet.
